"THEY HIT UPON POWERS."

Lexington Herald.

It is perhaps due to Colonel Thomas C. Campbell to give editorial space to the following sentences in the report of Dr. O'Mahony of an interview with him in Georgetown:

From Dr. O'Mahony's Letter.

I have a talk today with Colonel Campbell, of counsel for the prosecution. I asked him to tell me, and, through me, The Herald and its readers, why he had, or the prosecution had, placed Caleb Powers on trial. Colonel Campbell, in a most interesting way, proceeded to analyze the case. He said that after the crime of Goebel's assassination had been committed they looked around for the man with the motive. They hit upon Powers, among others, because he was an ambitious man and wanted to become the leader of the Republicans of the state. Having found the man with the motive, there was no difficulty in finding the man with the purpose. Colonel Campbell firmly believes in the guilt of Caleb Powers as an accomplice before the fact. That his belief is not shared generally cuts no figure. It is certain that he will be one of the main advocates of conviction before the jury.

Colonel Campbell said that it had been his aim to have no testimony introduced that was not thoroughly reliable. He distinctly disavowed responsibility for Weaver. He said that when the Weaver story was first told him he advised that, as Weaver displayed little knowledge of Frankfort, he be taken to the locality, so that he might be able to designate place. This was overruled and the Weaver testimony was admitted, with the results already known. The responsibility for Colonel Campbell placed upon Mr. S. K. Hendricks. The fact, however, that Colonel Campbell thought it worth while to disavow, through The Herald, responsibility for the Weaver episode is a matter worthy of consideration at this time.

We forbear to make any further comments that have been heretofore made on the introduction of the notorious strolling barber, Weaver, until Mr. Hendricks has opportunity to deny the grave charges made against him by his associate counsel or rather by his leader in this prosecution. Mr. Hendricks owes it to himself and his reputation as lawyer and gentleman, he owes to the people of his district who have honored him to repel this charge.

The admission made by Colonel Campbell that after the murder of Mr. Goebel "they looked around for the man with the motive and hit upon Powers" is no doubt partly sincere. It is no doubt accurate that without regard to any testimony "they hit upon Powers" and upon others; and having "hit" upon Powers and the others they went to work to establish an appearance of guilt; "to make a case;" to find testimony to maintain the "hit." This is only another and equivalent phrase to the now immortal phrase of Mr. James Andrew Scott "to damn the Republican party and hang Taylor." Having deliberately formed the plan, selected the victims and gotten possession of the legal machinery of the state and the county, they secured the services of detectives of all degrees and kinds; and then forced the enactment of the $100,000 blood money bill. The mere proposal to pass such a measure aroused every unscrupulous blood-sucker in Kentucky; awakened scores of unprincipled scoundrels, who

The Clerks of the Court of Appeals are filing opinions of the Court written from June, 1899, to June, 1900. There were 1,200 decisions during the year, and the Court has gained on the big number of cases on file on previous years. The new docket is being prepared and will probably be smaller than last year. August 28 is the last day on which cases may be filed to be heard at September term.

at once went to work in the hope of securing part of that bribe. It is not the payment of bribes that corrupts half so much as the hope and promise of bribes.

Many of those who have figured upon the amount they will receive from that bribe will be disappointed; many who have direct or implied promises will find themselves cheated at the end. It is probable that the $100,000 has been promised over and over again. It tempted the cupidity; it whetted the appetite of many who will never appear in the case. These bribes were not that the real murderers should be discovered; that men should tell the truth as it actually was; but the victims having been selected, that the "confessions" and discoveries should be to convict those victims and establish that theory. The guilty parties were not wanted unless they were those who had been "hit upon." Any "confessions," any discoveries which did not implicate these selected victims were not wanted. And so long as the trials were confined to the reports sent to the Campbell papers, the prosecution was perfect, the testimony quite conclusive and the theory well sustained by "confessions" and statements of counsel for the prosecution. But when the trial was in Court—even in the Scott Circuit Court—when the witnesses were under oath and subjected to cross-examination—even when the cross-examination was hampered and embarrassed by adverse rulings, the prosecution became the real defendant, the witnesses were put on trial and the theory falls under the weight of perjury and perjurers.

Mr. Goebel was foully murdered; his assassins ought to have been discovered. Honest and capable detectives ought to have unraveled the apparent mystery, and no doubt would have discovered the murderer or murderers and had him or them brought to deserved punishment. It is not impossible that these criminals are known to some of those connected with the prosecution. But every step taken by those who owned the machinery of the prosecution had the appearance of being taken to prevent an exhaustive and perfectly impartial investigation. The arrest of Harland Whittaker, of Silas Jones and of others; the pretended "confessions" of Yontsey, Culton, Combs and similar events—in the light of what has been revealed seemed to have been for the purpose of confusing the real truth and securing the conviction of those "hit upon."

The discovery of the criminals ought yet to be made. It is a blot upon the state that those who shot Mr. Goebel have not been discovered. We trust that the guilty persons will be discovered and punished. But the prosecution must cease to be a mere political movement for the purpose of making political advantage. Capable and honest detectives must take the place of those who have disgraced the state and then the trials must be had before juries not picked by partisans and before a Court that will do

Question Answered.
Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. For sale by J. C. Peck.
